TABLE OF CONTENTS.

| OURSELVES                                      | 1 |
| PAVITRA BHARATA—                              | 1 |
| P. V. Ramaswami Raja (Bur. at Law)           | 3 |
| A FOWLER AND A SERPENT—                      | 4 |
| (Adapted from the Mahabharata)               | 9 |
| ELEMENTS OF THE VEDANTA—                      | 5 |
| Chapter 1                                      | 11 |
| SEEKERS AFTER GOD—                            | 7 |
| I. Nanda, the Pariah Saint                    | 12 |
| Doing Good to the World—                     | 8 |
| Swami Vivekananda                             | 10 |
| Buddha—The Ideal Karma Yogi                   | 10 |
| Swami Vivekananda                             | 11 |
| Thoughts on the Bhagavad Gita                 | 12 |
| True Greatness or Vasudeva Sastry—            | 12 |
| A Novel by T. C. Natarajan                    | 12 |
| EXTRACTS                                      | 12 |
| NEWS AND NOTES, &C.                           | 12 |

PROSPECTUS.

The Prabuddha Bharata or Awakened India.

A Monthly Magazine devoted to Religion and Philosophy published on the 1st of every Month.

In the wonderful disposition of Providence, it has been designed that truths revealed, perhaps for the first time to the sages of our country and treasured up by them in a monumental form, should cross oceans and mountains and spread among nations utterly foreign to us both in their past and their present lives. The Kantian revolution in Western Philosophy the out-pourings of the Upanishad-intoxicated Schopenhaur, the abstruse metaphysics of the Post Kantians, the revival of Sanskrit Study, the Theosophic Movement, the conversion and activity of Mrs. Besant, the remarkable lectures of Max Muller, the Great Parliament of Religions and the timely appearance of Swami Vivekananda have all been unswervingly tending to the dissemination of those great truths, Kripānanda, Abhayānanda, Yogānanda and a whole host of converts to Vedantism are springing up everywhere. Science itself has become a willing tool in the hands of our ancient philosophy. The word Vedanta is nearly as familiar on the shores of Lake Michigan as on the banks of the Ganges.

In the midst of such revivalistic stirring, noise and fervour abroad, it is painful to notice that materialism, such is the result of the one-sided Western education given in our Schools and colleges—should in one form or another still have a considerable sway in our own country. With a view to remedy this sad state of affairs as far as it may be in our humble means, it has been arranged to start a Journal devoted to our Religion and Philosophy called the Prabuddha Bharata or AWAKENED INDIA. It will be a sort of supplement to the Brahmayadin and seek to do for students, young men and others what that is already doing so successfully for the more advanced classes. It will with that view endeavour to present the sacred truths of Hindu Religion and the sublime and beautiful ideal of the Vedanta in as simple, honest, and interesting a manner as possible, and amongst others, will contain Puranic and Classical Episodes illustrative of those great truths and that high ideal, Philosophical Tales and Novels of Modern type, short articles on Philosophical Subjects written in a simple, popular style free from technicalities, and the Lives and Teachings of Great Sages and Bhāratas irrespective of caste, creed or nationality, who are and ever will be the beacon lights of humanity.

The editors of the magazine undertake the work purely as a labour of love and they have secured the sympathy and support of some of the eminent Thinkers of the day including Swami Vivekananda now in America. They look for no personal gain from the concern and their only aim is to get for the truths of the Hindu Religion as wide a circulation as possible. The subscription is fixed at the very low figure of Rs. 18 per annum, including postage, specially with a view to place it within the means of every one, however poor, who has a regard for the higher interests of life. To our youths who are misled by the glamour of materialism, the Prabuddha Bharata will ever be a continual warning voice and a religious instructor and to our more advanced brethren its pages will afford a pleasant and healthy spiritual recreation. It should therefore be the look-out of every young man to provide himself with a copy, and parents especially will be failing in their duty if they do not subscribe for the Journal at least in the interests of their children.

P. AIYASAMI, M.A., B.A.,
R. R. RAJAM IYER, B.A.,
G. G. NARASIMHA CHARYA, B.A.,
B. V. KAMESVARA IYER, B.A.
INDEX

(VOL. 1.)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Extracts:</th>
<th>Pages</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Aid to right thought</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atman, &amp;e</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Buddha: the ideal Karma Yogi</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Doing good to the world</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Each is great in his own place</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fanaticism</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fowler ad a serpent, a</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Glory of devotion, the</td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gnaana-Yoga</td>
<td>91, 113, 125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Higher celerlessness, the</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karma-Yoga</td>
<td>131</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Living as few, and the dead are many, the</td>
<td>21</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mind, a addled monkey</td>
<td>96</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Narrow wy, the</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sages of Idia, the</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Symbols, t</td>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vedanta, its application to Indian life, the</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is fly</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Pitfalls in th' Vedanta:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Renunciates</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is not asceticism</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Seekers after/b:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>i. Nanda, the Pariah Saint</td>
<td>7, 17, 29, 53, 65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ii. Sri Rukkrishna Paramahamsa</td>
<td>78, 92, 114</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Selections:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>12, 23, 24, 36, 44, 114</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Symbology:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Natarija</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seshasayya</td>
<td>54</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| Thoughts of the Bhagavad Gita:                                         | 10, 39, 47, 69, 95, 127, 1/ |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Translators:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Skrdopanishad, the</td>
<td>129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spirit Universal, the</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>True Greatness or Vasudeva Sastry:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>An novel by T. C. Natarajan...</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11, 23, 59, 71, 81, 118, 131, 143</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Editorial:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Bhakti</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>First principle, a</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hinduism and religious evolution</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Modern Civilisation and the Vedanta</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ourselves</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Para-bhakti or wisdom</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Retrospect</td>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sages and their usefulness, the</td>
<td>133</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Saka and the steam engine</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Universality of the Vedanta, the</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What is Vedanta</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Work and Saintship</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Elements of the Vedanta:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1, 115, 130</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EDITOR: SRI B. R. RAGHAI AYAR Ourselves.

The ready response with which our prospectus has been favored on all sides, the eagerness with which our movement has been welcomed, and the support that has been generously promised to us in several quarters, all show that the time is ripe for similar undertakings, that there is a real demand in the country for spiritual nourishment—for the refreshment of the soul. But a few years ago, the Prabuddha Bharata or the Brahmachārīdīn would have been utterly impossible. The promise of many a western ‘ism’ had to be tried, and the problem of life had itself been forgotten for a while in the noise and novelty of the steam-engine and the electric tram; but unfortunately steam-engines and electric trams do not clear up the mystery: they only thicken it. This was found out, and a cry, like that of the hungry lion, arose for religion and things of the soul. Science eagerly offered its latest discoveries, but all its evolution theories and heredity doctrines did not go deep enough. Agnosticism offered its philosophy of indifference, but no amount of that kind of opium-eating could cure the fever of the heart. The Christian Missionary offered his creed, but as a creed it would not suit; India had grown too big for that coat.

Just then it was found, and here is the wonder of Providential disposition, that the eyes of the western world were turned towards India, turned, not as of old for the gold and silver she could give, but for the more lasting treasures contained in her ancient sacred literature. Christian Missionaries in their eagerness to vilify the Hindu, had opened an ancient magic chest the very smell of whose contents caused them to faint. Oriental scholars, the Livingstones of eastern literature, had unwittingly invoked a deity, which it was not in their power to appease. As philologists are succeeded by philosophers, Colebrooke and Caldwell give birth to Schopenhauer and Deussen. The white man and his fair lady stray into the Indian woods and there, come across the Hindu sage under the banyan tree. The hoary tree, the cool shade, the refreshing stream, and above all the hoarier, coarser and the more refreshing philosophy that falls from his lips enchant them. The discovery is published; pilgrims multiply. A Sannyasin from our midst carries the altar fire across the seas. The spirit of the Upanishads makes a progress in distant lands. The procession develops into a festival. Its noise reaches Indian shores, and behold! our motherland is awakening.

We all remember the story—the Sleeping Beauty—how she was shut up by enchantment in a castle where she slept a hundred years. How during that time an impenetrable wood sprang up around her, and how at last she was reanointed by a fair young prince and married him. India may be likened to that Sleeping Beauty: she has slept very long indeed and thick forests of confusing creeds—social, political and religious—have grown up around her. The enchantment that sent her to sleep was Providence itself, the most mysterious of all kinds of magic. When she began to sleep, the fair young prince (the modern civilized world) now wooing her was not on the scene. At present however, the lover’s suit is progressing, the thick forests are clearing away, and the marriage of the east and the west, which promises to come off in no distant date, will be one of the grandest, the most romantic and the most fruitful marriages known to history.

The awakening we speak of, of which there is an abundance of symptoms on every side will however not be like that of an eagle, which rises from sleep with renewed vigor and strength to roam and to fight, but that of a nightingale melting the hearer’s hearts with its soft sweet melodies. Already the message of our motherland has gone to nations burning with social and political fever, and soothed them. To serve in the spreading of that message, and help in clearing away the haze that naturally prevails in our newly awakened country, after so long a sleep, will be the ambition of the Journal we have been enabled to bring into life to-day. The task we have set to ourselves is lighter than it would otherwise be, as there are journals like the Brahma pada already working in the field with wonderful results. Ours is only a humble attempt in the direction of these journals and simplicity and sincerity will be our chief aim. We have great faith in the system of teaching principles by means of stories and indeed, as Swâmi Vivekânanda wrote in his letter to us, "There is a great chance, much more than you dream of, for those wonderful stories scattered all over the Sanskrit literature to be re-written and made popular. For these stories are not like the unhealthy, sensational, fifth-rate French novels of the day, the cobwebs spun by idle brains, but the natural flowers of great minds that could, from a Himalayas-like philosophic altitude take a sweeping and sympathetic survey of the human race. That is why they bear the stamp of immortality on them. Centuries rolled away before the Râmâyana and Mahâbhârata appeared, and centuries have yet to roll on before another of their kind can be made. They are not older than the mountains, but they will live longer than the mountains, and have more influence. One special feature of these stories is that they have a different meaning for every stage of human growth, and the ordinary man as well as the philosopher enjoys them, though each understands them in his own way. The reason for that is, that these stories were composed by men, far advanced in the ladder of human progress, some of whom, indeed, were on the top-most ring. Extracts and adaptations from these great books will be a chief feature of our Journal."

It is not however, intended to fill the whole Journal with stories only. Every issue will contain a number of articles on serious subjects; but care will be taken to make them simple and interesting, and the technicalities of metaphysics will be scrupulously avoided. We shall endeavour to act up, as far as we can, to the advice which Swâmi Vivekânanda has kindly given us with regard to the conduct of the Journal—"Avoid all attempts to make the Journal scholarly; it will slowly make its way all over the world, I am sure. Use the simplest language possible and you will succeed. The main feature should be the teaching of principles through stories. Do not make it metaphysical at all. Go on bravely. Do not expect success in a day or a year. Always hold on to the highest. Be steady. Be obedient and eternally faithful to the cause of truth, humanity and your country and you will move the world. Remember it is the person—the life which is the secret of power, nothing else. ..."—and he has generously undertaken to contribute to the Journal as often as he can.

Though an organ of Hindu religion, the Prabuddha Bharata will have no quarrel with any other religion: for, really speaking, all religions are simply different phases of the same Truth, different methods of approaching God. 'I am in all religions as the string in a pearl garland,' says the Lord. What humanity is to man, what existence is to living beings, that, Vedântism is to religions: it is their common essence, their inner unity, and as such, it can possibly have no quarrel with any of them—the whole has no quarrel with the part. On the other hand, it approves of the existing differences, and even welcomes their multiplication, so that no man might be left godless for want of a religion suited to his nature.

This Vedântic idea of religious unity, or rather, of religious variety implies, not merely the spiritual growth of the individual from stage to stage but also the growth of society by the due co-ordination of creeds. The Prabuddha Bharata will deal with both the aspects of the ideal. The individuals make up the society, and the advancement of the former necessarily results in that of the latter. At the same time, society acts upon the individual, and conditions him. As the two are thus found to act and re-act on each other, it is necessary, that, side by side with the ideal of individual perfection, that of social perfection should also be presented. The ideal society, according to the Vedânta, is not a millennium on earth, nor a reign of angels, where there will be nothing but thorough equality of men, and peace, and joy—the Vedânta indulges in no such chimeras—but one, where religious toleration, neighbourly charity, and kindness even to animals form the leading features, where the fleeting concerns of life are subordinated to the eternal, where man strives not to externalise, but to internalise himself more and more, and the whole social organism moves, as it were, with a sure instinct towards God. This ideal will be steadily presented in these pages, but no attempt will be made to restore old institutions which have had their day, any more than to restore to life a dead tree. Our object will be to present the ideal, which, fortunately, never gets too old, leaving everyone to seek his own path of realisation. The policy of breaking away from society and that of allowing it to grow of itself have, both of them their uses, and are equally welcome. But it is our firm conviction, that any real social advancement towards the ideal can only be effected by the example and teachings of men, who are intimately acquainted with the foundations of our society, or for that matter, any society whatsoever, who, by means of their own perfection, can understand the successive stages of human evolution as fully and as naturally, as the old man understands the child, the boy, and the adult, who know that, whether we will or no, the progress of the society as well as of the individual is always Godward, and know also that the means has always to be consistently subordinated to the end. Society is no toy and its architects cannot be ordinary men. The true social reform has, at all times, come only from men, who strove to be good, rather than to do good, men from whose personal goodness sprung social advancement as naturally, noiselessly and as beautifully as the smell from the full blown rose.

Having thus far stated, at some length, the objects and methods of the present Journal, we leave it to our readers to judge for themselves how far they are right and deserve encouragement. The movement would not have sprung into existence but for the active support of some really great men. 'To work we have the right' and the fruits are cheerfully resigned to Him who guides all and Himself wants no guide.

---

Pavitra Bhārata

AND

THE STORY OF NACHIKETA.

Bhārata is the name of our country, which foreigners have called India. Bhārata is of many kinds. There is Brahma Bhārata or the Bhārata of the priestly class, who aim at salvation by ritualistic observances enjoined by the Vedas. There is Kshatriya Bhārata or the military classes, who have, from time immemorial, been famous for their valour in the field of battle, and for the skill with which they have protected the rights of the various classes of people that constitute a kingdom. There is Vanija Bhārata or the Bhārata of the mercantile communities. Similarly, there is Pavitra Bhārata, or, Holy India as we may put it in English, of the many moods of internal light and peace, who, in conformity with the exalted tenets of that creed of creeds—the Vedānta—have concentrated their minds on the glory of the Paramatman and qualified themselves for bliss that knows no alloy. The character of this Pavitra Bhārata—i.e., mainly with respect to its aims—is illustrated by the beautiful story of Nachiketa. There was a great king who had a son named Nachiketa. Prince Nachiketa did not trouble himself much about mundane matters. He had a devotional turn of mind. His instincts led him to the Paramatman. He was desirous of knowing all about Him. His King performed a great sacrifice, at which all the worldly effects of his command were given away to the officiating priests. The very territories of the king, including the royal domain, were given away. Nachiketa asked his father in a meditative mood—"Father, to whom do you give me?" The king replied—"I give you unto death." Nachiketa went over to the mansion of death, and lay down on the dais in front of the portal of his garden. Three days had so passed away; Yama turned up eventually, and finding the royal youth at his gate, said—"Young man, I am sorry to see you here without food or drink for three days. The wise here said that the man, who lies at the gate of another without food or drink for a day, takes away a great deal of the good that belongs to him. You have been at my gate, for three days like that. I am certainly a loser to a great extent by it. Let me compensate myself by granting you three boons. Specify them as you please." Nachiketa began by saying—"O Yama, my first boon shall be a mind free from passion and full of peace." Yama saw the direction in which the young man was moving. He replied—"O Nachiketa, it behoves you to ask for more useful and desirable things than this. Here are fair women, excellent chariots, concerts of music, immense wealth, luxuries seldom known to men, take them all and many more like them. I shall give you, no life—say, longer life, than the longest yet known on earth, with perpetual youth and vigour. Take them all, my good man and be happy." Náchiketa replied—

"O Yama, these are all subject to the laws of to-morrow. I want that which is eternal and which knows no beginning nor middle or end." The young man stuck to his point. Yama endeavoured to get him to accept it. But all his efforts were in vain. Náchiketa had his wish. The Parasurama was revealed to him by Yama. The Prince returned to his father's house and lived like a Sanñyásin, or, spiritual ascetic, attending to the affairs of this world in the spirit in which one like him alone could attend to them. He used to say to every one that asked him—"Who attained pre-eminent happiness?"—in the words of scripture, "Bhuma Vidvánaparam,"—i.e., "He, who knows the Supreme Being attains Supreme Bliss." This is the mute wish of all good and holy men who form Pavitra Bhrátar. It is their greatness which makes up the greatest greatness of Bhrátar. It is this greatness of Bhrátar that has secured for it the reverence of the world's population. Long live Pavitra Bhrátar!

P. V. Ramanwami Rau,
(Bar-at-Law.)

A Fowler and a Serpent.

There was an old lady of the name of Gautami who was remarkable for her patience and tranquility of mind. One day she found her son dead in consequence of having been bitten by a serpent. A Fowler, by name Arjunaka, bound the serpent with a string, brought it before Gautami and said—"This wicked serpent has been the cause of thy son's death. O blessed lady, tell me quickly how this wretch is to be destroyed! Shall I throw it into the fire or shall I hack it into pieces? This infamous killer of a child does not deserve to live longer."

Gautami replied—"Do thou, O Arjunaka! release this serpent. It doth not deserve death at thy hands. By killing it, this my boy will not be restored to life and by letting it live, no harm will be caused to thee. Who would go to the interminable regions of death by slaying this living creature? Those that make themselves light by the practice of virtue, manage to cross the sea of life, even as a ship crosses the ocean. But those that make themselves heavy with sin, sink into the bottom, even as an arrow thrown into the water."

The Fowler—"I know, O thou lady, that knowest the difference between right and wrong, that the great are afflicted with the afflictions of all creatures. Those who value peace of mind assign everything to the course of Time, but practical men soon assuage their grief by revenge. Therefore, O lady, assuage thy grief by having the serpent destroyed by me."

Gautami—"People like us are never afflicted by such misfortune. Good men are always intent on virtue, the death of the boy was predestined; therefore I am unable to approve of the destruction of this serpent. Brahmins do not harbour resentment, because resentment leads to pain. Do thou, O good man, forgive and release the serpent out of compassion."

The Fowler—"Let us earn great and inexhaustible merit hereafter, by killing this creature, even as a man acquires great merit and confers it on his victim as well, by sacrifice upon the altar. Merit is acquired by killing an enemy; by killing this despicable creature, thou shalt acquire great and true merit hereafter.

Gautami—"What good is there in tormenting and killing an enemy, and what good is won by not releasing an enemy in our power? Therefore, O thou of benign countenance, why should we not forgive this serpent and earn merit by releasing it?"

The Fowler—"A great number of creatures ought to be protected from the wickedness of this one. Virtuous men abandon the vicious to their doom. Let me therefore kill this wicked creature."

Gautami—"By killing this serpent, my son, O Fowler, will not be restored to life, nor do I see that any other end will be attained by its death; therefore, do thou, O Fowler, release that living creature. It came not into life by our order, nor does it live through our sufferance, we have no right to kill it.

The Fowler said—"Nor had it any right to kill thy child, O sacred mother?"

Gautami—"The death of my child was a predestined affair, it was the will of God and the serpent was only the instrument. And even granting that it was the real and only cause of my child's death, its committing a sin will not justify our doing the same. It fell into error through ignorance and our killing it will be much more than an error; it will be a sin committed with knowledge and therefore wilfully."

The Fowler—"By killing Vritra, Indra secured the best portion of sacrificial offerings and so also did Mahadeva by destroying a wicked sacrifice. Do thou, therefore, destroy this serpent immediately without any misgivings in thy mind."

Although thus repeatedly urged by the Fowler for the destruction of the serpent, the high-souled Gautami did not bend her mind to that sinful act. The serpent painfully bound with the cord, singing a little and maintaining its composure with great difficulty, then uttered these words slowly in human voice—

"O foolish Arjunaka, what fault is there of mine? I have no will of my own and am not independent! Mritsyā (the God of death) sent me on this errand! By his direction have I bitten this child and not out of any anger or choice on my part; therefore, if there be any sin in this, O Fowler, the sin is his."

The Fowler said—"If thou hast done this evil led thereto by another, the sin is thine also, as thou art an instrument in the act. As in the making of an earthen vessel, the potter's wheel and rod and other things are all regarded as causes, so are thou O serpent, a cause in the matter.

The serpent said—'As the potter's wheel, rod and other things are not independent causes, even so am I no independent cause! Therefore this is no fault mine, nor am I guilty of any sin! Or if thou thinkest that there is sin, it lies in the aggregate of causes.'

The fowler said—'Not deserving of life, O foolish one, why dost thou hang so many words, O wretch of a serpent? Thou deservest death at my hands.'

The serpent replied—'O fowler, as the officiating priests at a sacrifice do not acquire the merit of the act, even so should I be regarded with respect to the result in this connection.'

The serpent directed by Mrityu, having said this, Mrityu himself appeared there and, addressing the serpent, spoke thus:

'Guided by Kāla, (Time) I, O serpent, sent thee on this errand and neither thou nor I am the cause of this child's death. Even as the clouds are tossed hither and thither by the wind, I am, O serpent, directed by Kāla. All influences appertaining to Satwa or Rajas or Tamas have Kāla for their soul, as they operate in all creatures. The whole universe, O serpent, is imbued with this same influence of Kāla. Sun, moon, water, wind, fire, sky, earth, rivers and oceans and all existent and non-existent objects are created and destroyed by Kāla. Knowing this, why dost thou, O serpent accuse me? If any fault attack to me in this, thou also wouldst be to blame.'

The serpent replied—'I do not, O Mrityu, blame thee. I only aver that I was influenced and directed by thee. Whether any blame attaches to Kāla or not, it is not for me to say.'

Then addressing the fowler, it said, 'thou hast listened to what Mrityu has said; therefore it is not proper for thee to torment me who am guiltless, by tying me with this cord.'

The fowler replied—'I have listened to thee as well as Mrityu and both of you are the cause of the child's death. Accused be the wicked and vengeanceful Mrityu that causes affliction to the good! Thee, I shall kill, that art sinful and engaged in sinful acts.'

Mrityu said,—'We both are not free agents, but are dependent on Kāla and ordained to do our appointed work. Thou shouldst not find fault with us, if thou dost consider the matter thoroughly.'

Hardly had he said this, when Kāla himself appeared on the scene and spoke thus to the party assembled together.

Neither Mrityu nor the serpent nor I, am guilty of the death of any creature. We are merely the immediate causes. The true cause is the past karma actions of that creature. The child here, died by the result of its own karma in this past. As men make, from a lump of clay, whatever they wish to make, so do men attain to various results determined by karma. As light and shadow are related to each other, so are men related to karma through their own actions. Therefore none here caused the child's death, he himself was the cause.'

Gautami said—'Neither Kāla, nor Mrityu, nor the serpent is the cause in this matter. This child has met with death as the result of its own karma. I have so acted in the past, that my son should now die. Let now Kāla and Mrityu retire from this place and do thou Arjunaka release this serpent.'

Then Kāla and Mrityu and the serpent and the fowler went back to their respective places, but Gautami who knew the truth smiled and said to herself—'What a dramatall this is! Karma is itself a conventional word. The truth is, not an atom, but by the bidding of th' Lord, may not an atom is outside Him and wha and where then are life and death?'

(Adapted from the Mahābhārata.)

Elements of the Veda'nta.

CHAPTER I.

THE OBJEC OF VEDA'NTA.

It was a very ' bauseous evening calm and free like the heart of saint. Nature seemed to be wrapt up herself, blissful meditation—like a sage in Samadhi. The birds had gone to their nests; the cattle were safe in their sheds, and after the day's toil, man was either saying his prayers, or enjoying the repose at reigned throughout. The nightingale alone was pouring forth a flood of the softest melody, while accorded very well with the sublime stillness of the hour. The song of any other bird would have appeared silly at that time. The gentle, unobtrusive smell of the flowers of the evening enhanced its sweetness, while the gentle stream of the infant moonlight of the time lent to it an ineffable charm. The Jumna was flowing on at its usual majestic, and on its silver sands, now became classic by the wealth of associations, and on that splendid moonlit evening, dest Krishna accompanied by the gopis, and Radha, Rukmini and Sayyabha. The favorite flute was soon on his lips, and the tune he sang at that silent hour,—ah! who can describe it—it was to the galaxy that surrounded her a verdant magic spell. This harmony was not ever to last long, for shortly after, Krishna raised a calf lying dead a few yards' distance from them, and when approached, it was found to be his most favourite one. The sorrow for the loss was general, but after musing for a while, Krishna said: 'No matter it can be restored to life. There is one way for it and only one, and that is, that every one of you should speak out what she most sincerely desires at this hour, what thoughts the moonlight, the river and this evening hour put into her mind. This, if honestly and frankly said would bring back the calf to life. Such is the power of truth.
I was agreed to, and the ladies began one after another to speak out their hearts. One gopi said, 'I should most like to distractably enjoy the music of thy unmelodious Gopi Krishna! That I value above all others.' Another said, 'I wish to swim with the breeze in this delightful moonlight in this Jumna which flows on like melted silver.' A third said, 'I have always been longing, and the desire is now intensified, O! Krishna, for so much independence and manhood, longing to set at naught all social superstitions about woman's modesty, weakness and so forth, all of which merely mean woman's slavery, to wear male attire, and walk about with a stick in hand and shoes and turban just wherever I please. Woman's life, as I see it, is simply a curse.' A fourth said, 'I should like to be a fish, saying his prayers on the Himalayas and performing ablutions on evenings like these at the very birthplace of the Ganges.' Another said, 'I wish to go to help the poor, looking after the sick and the wounded and carry consolation and peace to desolate homes. What selfish enjoyment could be desired in this world so full of misery?' 'I should like to be a great orator,' said another, delivering, on evenings like these, eloquent speculations on the reform of society, advancement of civilization and so on, and be talked about everywhere. These do not please me,' said another. 'I should like to be the very harmony that reigns in this hot, the inner calm that pervades the world this splendid evening. The turn passed over—one wanted with another jewels, another beauty, and so on—division came to Satyashama and she said, 'my only wish at all times, is to have you, my Krishna, incomparable charming Krishna, all for myself.' Then follow Radha saying, 'Beautiful as our bodies are, I wish that we should cast them off and be the very life that binds us both. I wish to be all love and thing else. There is nothing sweeter or more artful.' Last came Rukmini's turn and she said, 'My Lord, what a curious drama you have caused in so short a time! All my sisters here have spoken the truth, but what pleasure! one did not please the rest, and that is because the things desired have no intrinsic virtue of their own. One thing however is common among all here, namely, a desire for happiness and that too for that kind of happiness, knowing which the mind does not wish to know another and where it permanently abides. It is this stability, this fullness of knowledge and this happiness that all seek alike, but they seek for them exactly where they are not. The large catalogue of things now desired by them itself shows that it is not in the power of any external thing to give what they seek. I have learnt this, and knowing this, sit calmly and in the self, or rather the self that alone remains (for the 'I' is a changing external thing) are these three—permanence, bliss and knowledge. All I desire is that I should desire nothing and be the self alone.' No sooner were these words spoken, than the calf, which had already begun to show signs of life, rose up and danced with joy before the lovely group.
The mind, in all its longings after external things, i.e., as we have seen, really seeking the above indivisible compound—the Self—only in the wrong place, as the beetle in the story of Sir Walter Raleigh's escape from prison, that went seeking after butter smeared on its own head. Therefore does the Upanishad say 'Behold, not indeed for the husband's sake the husband is dear, but for the sake of the Self is dear, the husband. Behold, not indeed for the wife's sake the wife is dear, but for the sake of the Self is dear, the wife.'

This Self is not myself, or thyself, for the 'mine' and 'thine' belong to the mind which, as we have seen must cease before the Self is realised. In the light of the Self, the differences of I and You are not. The aim of the Vedanta is to point out where the Self is and how it can be reached. Whether we will or no, we or rather all living creatures are really seeking the Self in all their doings and the Vedanta only helps us in shaping our efforts in the right direction.

Seekers after God.

1. NANDA, THE PARIAH SAINT.

It has been well remarked, 'how poor a thing is man if above himself he cannot erect himself': and this erecting of ourselves above ourselves means nothing more than drawing out and developing the divinity that lies concealed in us. Man is a compound of brutality, humanity and divinity (Tamas, Rajas and Satwa) and in proportion as the last is developed, the other two leave him. Not the least remarkable of those that succeeded in this development of divinity—this erecting of oneself above oneself—was Nanda otherwise called, as we shall see why, Tirunalgopar.

Nanda was born in the Pariah caste, about six hundred years ago. The pariahs are probably the remnants of the ancient non-Aryans of the land and are, as is well-known, a despised class. They are regarded as outside the pale of the great Hindustani castes—Brahma, Kshatriya, Vaisya and Sudra—and it is considered pollution for a man of the three higher castes to approach a pariah. They are in some places attached to land as serfs and in others live by cultivating the soil and are, for their labor, rewarded with a share of the produce, just enough to maintain themselves and their families. In no case, however, have they the opportunity for growing rich or owning property. The religious generosity of the higher castes having seldom been so great as to reach this neglected factor of the community, it has been quite passively suffered to build its own society and its own pantheon, and the result is a number of gross and curious social customs and a multitude of demoniacal gods.

The parahy (the quarters of the pariahs, always remote from those of the other castes) of Adhnanur* in which Nanda was born did not, we may be sure, differ in any leading feature from those of today. A number of small, unventilated, single-roomed, hovel-like huts with pumpkin creepers covering their tops and scattered too wildly to be classified into streets or rows, black earthenware generally kept outside the huts, broken mud walls, heaps of rotting bones and other filthy matter abounding on every side, cocks and hens that chuckled and bade their time, dogs that barked all day long, half-naked women that barked officer and louder and troops of dirty, sunburnt and naked children playing or quarrelling—such were the surroundings amidst which our great saint was ushered into the world. Our actions are mixed in character, partly good and partly bad and Nanda, to whom it was given, by the goodness of his previous Karma, to set an inspiring example to the world and grow into god, was destined, by the necessary counterpart of the same Karma, to be born in the midst of a barbarous community: but the beauty of Providence is such that our very punishments are blessings in disguise, and the apparently unfavorable conditions, under which Nanda was born, themselves prove to be, as we shall see, for his own good and indirectly for that of the world.

Even in his early boyhood, he was, as we may easily understand, unlike the other boys of the parahy: his very play consisted in making figures in clay of God, i.e., as he that age wanted Him to be—a stout, black man with bold whiskers, a huge lace turban, high-heeled native shoes, and an axe or a scythe in his hand and at the same time very trustworthily, and kin and merciful to those that sought his protection. To make such clay gods, to sing and dance around them, to carry them along in procession, to organize an infant band of bakts (pious men) and make festivals for his gods were his chief juvenile sports. The small circular goparum (tower) of the Sivakosthappala in the Brahmin part of Adhnanur had a strange fascination for his boyish imagination for there were beauty, grandeur and, as he could not approach it, mystery enough to set them forth in relief. It was this love of the grand, the beautifull, the mysterious that was remarkable in Nand and chiefly contributed to his salvation. He would often wistfully gaze at that tower wondering at its shape, size and grandeur and busily form guesses about the treasure underneath concealed to his view, which it was meant to glorify. Often as the village god passed in procession with torchlight, music, drums and Vedic chant, Nanda, followed by other pariah boys would run forth to obtain a view, however distant of the festival and return deeply impressed with the procession and its poetic associations. He had an inborn respect for all holy things—temples, festivals, Brahmins and the Vedic, whose low birth tended greatly to develop.

As he grew into manhood, his imaginative fevor and piety also grew with him and deepened and he became more and more eager to contribute what he could, however humble it might be, to the service of the Lord. It is the tendency of true
THE AWAKENED INDIA.

July 1896.

...to grow till it overflows the heart, and then it can no longer be shut up within, but must necessarily show itself out in action. Nanda long thought over what he could do to please the Lord: he was not rich, he was of low birth: no kind of charity readily suggested itself to him. One day while seriously thinking over the matter, it struck him, all on a sudden, that he might supply temples with leather for drums. To him, there was something almost miraculous in the very suddenness of the thought and he rose up with joy and exclaimed 'the Lord has spoken to me. He has commanded me to supply his drums with leather,' and he immediately set about preparing it. The Lord, indeed, does always keep conversing with us, only, we do not hear Him: and of the things we offer to him He chooses, not by their value (for He is Himself the Lord of all things) but by the love and piety with which they are offered. The labor of procuring leather, of wetting and taunting it and cutting it into proper sizes, henceforth became to Nanda a sacred pastime and the very smell of leather roused in his imaginative mind a group of holy associations.

He had a few friends in the sramchery, (it is a pity that their names have not been handed down to posterity) who shared his enthusiasm and sympathised with him in his labors. Every now and then he would speak to them of God's glory and grace, smear himself and them with sacred ashes, and one day, while there was no work to be done on the fields, he stole away with them (we must remember that these pariah were slaves under the village landlords) to a famous temple new miles off, called Tirupunkoro now known an Old Vaitheswera koil. They went round the village three times, repeatedly besmeared themselves with sacred ashes and shouted forth the names of Siva. Nanda, was beside himself with pious enthusiasm and danced and wept, and after sunset, when the temple doors were opened, sent forth to the priest his offerings of coconuts, plaitain fruits and loads of leather. He and his companions stood outside the temple at a little distance from the flagstaff, and from there obtained occasional glimpses of the Image within.

Their joy, particularly that of Nanda, knew no bounds, when they beheld for the first time, though from a distance, the mysterious saucenactorum of the great temple all radiant with light. The ringing of bells, the crowds of neat looking pigs devotees, the recitation of sacred verses, the pujas, the burning of camph, the worshipping with light and other imposing rituals of the temple, and above all the Lingam (Image of Siva) itself, which by its very form filled the whole place with a peculiar solemnity and sacredness, far exceeded his grandest expectations and impressed his imagination much more deeply (here his low birth was an advantage to him) than they did, that of the Brahmin worshippers inside, who were familiarised to them.

There was to him there a mystery only half cleared, and a solemnity he had never known before: he eagerly drank in the spectacle which to him was new and fascinating; tears flowed in torrents from his eyes and his emotional communion with God became every moment closer and closer, till at last he became completely absorbed in meditation and all thought expired in the enjoyment. Those that saw him were filled with wonder at the steadiness of his devotion, his self-absorption and the serenity that shone in his face in spite of his low caste, and before he woke from his devotional trance, a large and admiring crowd had gathered around him. The sensation created at the time was so great, that his visit to Tirupunkoor has made a distinct epoch in its history and richly added to the glory of its temple, for tradition asserts that while he was standing behind the flag-staff and struggling to get a view of the Lingam inside, Siva took pity on him and ordered Nand (the image of a bull placed opposite to the Lingam in all Sivite temples) to move a little to one side, that His low caste devotee might get a view of Him: and accordingly unto this day, the huge figure of Nand at Tirupunkoor is placed not exactly opposite to the Image of Siva but leaning to one side.

(To be continued).

Doing good to the World.

(A class lecture delivered in America.)

BY

SWAMI VIVEKA'NAZA.

Our duty to others means helping others; doing good to the world. Why should we do good to the world? Apparently to help the world, but really to help ourselves. We should always try to help the world; that should be the highest motive power in us, but, when we analyse it properly, we shall find that this world does not require our help. This world was not made, that I or you should come and help it. I once read a sermon in which was said:—"all this beautiful world is very good, because it gives us time and opportunity to help others." Apparently, it was a very beautiful sentiment; but, in one sense it was a wrong; for is it not a blasphemy to say that the world needs our help? We cannot deny that there is much misery in it; to go out and help others is, therefore, the highest motive power we have, although, in the long run we shall find that it is only helping ourselves. As a boy I had some white mice. They were kept in a little box and had little wheels made for them, and when the mice tried to cross the wheel, the wheels turned and turned, and the mice never got anywhere. So with the world and our helping it. The only help is that you get exercise. This world is neither good nor evil; each man manufactures a world for himself. If a blind man begins to think of it, it is either as soft or hard, or cold or hot. We are a mass of happiness or misery; we have seen that, hundreds of times in our lives. As a rule, the young are optimistic, and the old pessimistic. The young have all life before them, and the old are complaining; their day is gone; hundreds of desires, which they cannot fulfill, are struggling in their brain. Life at an end for them. Both are foolish. This life is either good nor evil. It is according to the different acts of mind in which we look at the world. The last practical man would call it neither good nor evil, i.e., by itself, is neither good nor evil. When it keeps me warm, we say:—“How beautiful is fire! When burns our fingers, we blame the fire. Still was neither good nor bad. We use it, it produced in the feeling of good or bad; and so also is this world. It is perfect. By perfection is meant that it is exactly fitted to meet its ends. We can all hope or be sure that it will go on, and need not bother or worry because of its work for all his life.” Then he went to a forest, and after long repetition of the magic word, a huge ghost appeared before him, with big teeth, and said:—“I am a ghost. I have been conquered by your magic. But you must keep me constantly employed. The moment you stop I will kill you.” The man said:—“Build me a palace,” and the ghost said, “It is done; the palace is built. "Bring me money,” said the man. “Here is your money,” said the ghost. “Now build a city in its place.” “That is done,” said the ghost; “anything more?” Now the man began to be frightened and said:—“I can give him nothing more to do; he does everything in a trice.” The ghost said:—“Give me something to do or I will eat you up.” The poor man could find no further occupation for him, and was frightened. So he ran and ran and at last reached the sage, and said: “Oh, sir, protect my life!” The sage asked him what was the matter, and the man replied: “I have nothing to give the ghost to do. Everything I tell him to do he does in a moment, and he threatens to eat me up if I do not give him work.” Just then the ghost arrived saying, “I’ll eat you up; I’ll eat you up, and he would have swallowed the man. The man began to shake; and begged the sage to save his life. The sage said:—“I will find you a way out. Look at that dog with a curly tail. Draw your sword quickly and cut the tail off and give it to the ghost to straighten out.” The man cut off the dog’s tail and gave it to the ghost, saying, “straighten that out for me.” The ghost took it and slowly and carefully straightened it out, but as soon as he let go, it instantly curled up again. Once more he laboriously straightened it out, only to find it again curled up as soon as he attempted to let go of it. Again he patiently straightened it out, but as soon as he let it go, it curled up again. So he went on for days and days, until he was exhausted, and said, “I was never in such trouble before in my life. I am an old veteran ghost, but never before was I in such trouble. I will not compromise with you,” he said to the man. “You let me off and I will let you keep all I have given you, and will promise not to harm you.” The man was much pleased and accepted the offer gladly.

This world is that dog’s curly tail, and people have been striving to straighten it out for hundreds of years, but when they let it go, it curls up again. How can it be otherwise? One must first know, how to work without attachment, then he will not be a fanatic. When we know that this world is like a dog’s curly tail and will never straighten, we shall not become fanatics. They can never do real work. If there were no fanaticism in the world it would make much more progress than it does now. It is all silly nonsense to think that fanaticism makes for the progress of mankind. It is, instead, a retarding block, by making hatred and anger and causing people to fight each other, and making them unsympathetic. Whatever we do or possess we think the best in the world, and those things we do not possess are of no value. So always remember this curious tail of the dog whenever you have a tendency to become a fanatic. Your need not be yourself sleepless; the world will go on. When you have avoided fanaticism then alone will you work well. It is the level-headed man, the calm man, of good judgment and cool nerves, of great sympathy and love, who does good work. The fanatic has no sympathy.

That is the first Great Purusha, who has neither hands nor feet, yet moves the swiftest; has neither eyes nor ears, yet sees and hears everything; is Himself uncomprehended yet comprehends everything.—Śrīdāsātīśvarapānidanand Buddha.

THE IDEAL KARMA YOGIN.

Swami Vivekananda concluded one of his class lectures on Karma Yoga, delivered at New York in the following words:

"I will tell you in a few words about one man who carried it (Karma Yoga) into practice. That man was Buddha. He is the man who ever carried this into perfect practice. All the prophets of the world, except Buddha, had external motive power to move them. The prophets of the world, with his exception, can be divided into two sets, one set who say they are God's come down on earth, and the other who say they are messengers from God; and both draw their impetus from outside. But Buddha is the only prophet who said 'I do not care to know your various theories about God. What is the use of discussing all the subtle doctrines about the soul? Do good and be good. And this will take you to whatever truth there is.' He was absolutely without motive power and what man worked more than he? Shew me in history one character who went so high above all; the whole human race has produced but one such character; such high philosophy; such sympathy; such a great philosopher, preaching the highest philosophy, and having sympathy for the lowest animals, and never making any claims. He is the ideal Karma Yogan, acting entirely without motive, and the history of humanity shows him to have been the greatest man ever born; beyond compare of all others, the greatest combination of heart and brain that ever existed, the greatest soul-power that was ever manifested. He was the first great reformer the world ever saw. He was the first who dared to say, 'Believe not, because some old manuscripts are produced, believe not because it is your national belief, because you have been made to believe from your childhood, but reason it out, and after you have analysed it, then, if you find it will do good to one and all, believe it, live up to it and help others to live up to it.' He works best who works without any motive power, neither for money nor anything else, and when a man can do that, he will be a Buddha, and out of him will come the power to work in such a manner as to transform the world. This is the very ideal of Karma Yoga."

Thoughts on the Bhagavad Gita.

Or all the great treasures bequeathed to us by our forefathers, there is none, excepting, of course, the Upanishads, so priceless as the Gita. It is a veritable song celestial and in its universality rivals God Himself. There is not one system of ethics, religion, or philosophy that does not silently take a corner in that wonderful little book which is, as it were, the Pantheon of the world. The most apparent contradictions find there; common meeting place and in the boundless diversity of its elements, there is a harmony as sweet and inspiring as that of the rainbow. The several members of the human body do not more willingly work together, the different strings of a well-tuned ‘celin do not more beautifully harmonize, than the great and apparently contradictory systems of the Sthvya, Yoga, Karma and Bhakti in that celestial song of the Lord, and in the words of the great prayer "Akhāṣā pathiktham thāyam, &c.," it may well be said that all the rivers of the great religions of the world joyously empty themselves in the sea of the Gita. Here is what an English writer has to say about it—"It is the work of the highest spiritual genius, the most deliberate and careful constructive skill, the most earnest desire of spiritual unity, and a spirit is moving through its speculative depths that could not be found within the limits of any creed—the spirit of universal religion."

One great feature of the Gita is, that it is not too high for even the infant inquirer, nor too low for the highest philosopher. It provides with a singularity of breadth, for every stage of human evolution and has something to teach every man that makes him better and purer.

Another feature is that it is infinitely rich in its suggestiveness. One reads it a hundred times and even then one cannot say that one has done with it; and the reason for it is that the Gita is not a treatise on philosophy nor a handbook of theories, but a conversation—a conversation, not however, between one man and another, nor one which took place several thousands of years ago which grandmotherly history has preserved for us, but a daily, nay hourly, mutually conversation between every man and God. As there is poetry in every one of our doings—reading, weeping, laughing, &c., so there is philosophy too, for philosophy is but the higher form of poetry, and we are conversing with God, in the sense of the Gita, every moment of our lives. This is why the Gita is so perennial in its suggestions. It appeals to you in every phase of your life, in every mood of your mind, and as you are infinite in your inside, so is the Gita. You are living over in its presence and there is a verse for every one of us there, in that book of life. Living as we do, as much under it as under the sky, let us know where we are and learn to regulate all our actions in its abounding light and live more and more consciously in its presence. It is with this purpose that, that little book has been prescribed, among a host of others, for constant reading (Paráyana).

Before entering into the subject of the Gáti, it may be well to consider the circumstances under which it was born. As it is well known, it was delivered by Sree Krishna to Arjuna on the occasion of one of the greatest battles of the world. Here, two very interesting questions naturally present them-seives—(1) why it was delivered to Arjuna in prefer-cence to others, and (2) why the particular hour of battle, so apparently unfit for calm thinking was chosen.

Taking the first question, it seems exceedingly strange at first sight, that Krishna should have chosen Arjuna for his disciple, while there were better men available in the Pándava camp itself. There was, for instance, Yudhishthira the very incarnation of virtue. Literature has no better example to prosent, of human goodness than this Dharmaputra who was in truth the hero as a good man (goodness demands more courage and heroism than wickedness) and whose whole life was one continued proof of the greatness of goodness.

(To be continued).

---

True Greatness of Vasudeva Sástry.

BY T. C. NARÁRAJAN.

CHAPTER I.

*What! Have not Ramanáswamy Aiyer, Mathuswamy, Subbiah, Venkateswara Aiyer—have not all these come? You fool, why don't you go and bring them man? I have never seen a bigger fool than you. Run out and fetch them man, said a voice in a way which showed that it was accustomed to be obeyed. 'I, I, I, we-we-we-went and ca-and, ca-and called them. They said, they, they,—' 'Stammer out' impatiently exclaimed the first voice again 'stammer your life out you rascal. Run out and fetch them, I say. Then you may be stammering all day long'; and Mathu, otherwise called Mottai (the bald-headed) at once ran out stammering. The voice, that commanded him belonged to Mr. Naryana Aiyer the great Deputy Collector of Madura, now enriched with a prefix Dewan Bahadur and a suffix c. i. e.—for some services, 'signal' as they were called, during a recent famine but more through the favor of the Government Gods. You must certainly have heard of Dewan Bahadur S. Naryana Aiyer, c. i. e. (otherwise there is no excuse for you, and not to know him argues yourself unknown) whose name appeared so many times in print in the Fort St. George Gazette itself whenever he was transferred or given privilege leave, who was every year freshly immortalised in the Revenue List of the Presidency, who was more than once thanked by the very grateful Court of Wards, for the able management of some estates entrusted to him, whose common sense was vouchsafed for, by the Collector, Mr. Assfoot himself, who condescended to remark that as far as he knew, his deputy was intelligent; who was spoken of or referred to in the local newspapers at least once a month (such was the understanding), who had several times tasted the honor of a Municipal Chairmanship, and of whose other merits we can at present only say &c., &c., &c. One thing however we could not, without greatly offending him, omit to mention, and that was, that he was known to the Secretary of State and the honorable members in the Privy Council, for, his name had been very prominently referred to in one of the Judgments of the High Court which went up to England for appeal. As soon as he heard, that that particular Judgment went up to the Privy Council for appeal, it is said, but I do not profess to know this personally, that he specially thanked the Judge, who had done him the honor of a reference in his Judgment. These however are official matters, with which fortunately we shall have nothing more to do in the story. One or two non-official circumstances that went to make up his greatness, we must however note. In the first place he was rich. Secondly he was princefully in his charities to the Brahmans and had, by public subscriptions and so forth, built many châttrams and hospitals. All these made him very popular. Besides he was a man of large sympathies and noble sentiments and there was for him, as we shall see, a grand future, which many might envy.

After sending away Mottai, he went inside the house and there finding Vasudeva Sástry performing puja in his usual grand style, said 'Yasu, enough, close your abop soon; people are waiting. To-day is not like other days: go on, finish the business soon; look sharp.' But what was the importance of that day, that even the gods should be so summarily dismissed? Naryana Aiyer was giving a feast that day to his friends in honor of the alphabet newly affixed to his name. It was a grand gain-day with sumptuous entertainment and music and other festivities, and the host was really elated with joy, at the happening of so great an event in his life and heartily spoke to his friends, of the causes that brought it about,—how his fame and ability had attracted the notice of his Excellence the Governor, how eagerly he was sent for, how respectful and kind the interview was, how dexterously he managed it, how much his Excellence was struck with the nobility of his character, the high type of his intellect, his eloquence and his statesmanship, and very much more in the same strain. Indeed, it was his opinion, and his friends too shared in it,—that, if ever there was any great man, he was one. It was difficult for him to think of himself as anything less than a Dewan Bahadur, c. i. e. When he went to bath, there he was a c. i. e. When eating, again was he a c. i. e. At no moment was he anything except a c. i. e. No other Native Dy. Collector had that beautiful suffix. The three letters were more to him than the three letters of the Pranayam of which so much is said. And to add to this, that the Governor should have sent for him ah!—who could calmly bear such greatness!

There was, however, one person in the household whom the day's festivities did not seem to have pleased, and that was strangely enough Mrs. Narayanay Aiyer herself. The Dewan Bahadur noticed the coldness in her face; he wanted very much to be congratulated by her,—but in vain. He showed his readiness to go shares with her in the matter of his new honor, and when they were alone during the night, called her 'Dewan Bahadur Seetha Lakshmy (that was her name): c. i. e., to which she only replied 'I feel sleepy, let us go to bed.' Narayanay Aiyer, c. i. e., was exceedingly annoyed at 'this cold nonsense' as he called it, but, checking himself said, 'I tell you this is the evil of ignorant uneducated, illiterate wives. What! I get two rare titles Dewan Bahadur and c. i. e., and you fool do not know their value, any more than an ass knows the smell of campion. Tell me, who else, which other Deputy Collector, has got these titles. There's not even a Dewan Bahadur among these Deputy Collectors. And then who else had an interview with the governor? You fool, you have no education and where's the good of my telling you these. You know nothing: this is the evil of ignorant wives. We must educate our women, educate them at once.' 'Certainly this very night,' replied Seetha.

'If getting mad over meaningless little things means education then God spare us from it. I have been watching you carefully all this day, and you have been almost beside yourself. Good God! What vanity, what self-praise, what joy at silly things and empty name! What is there in the three letters c. i. e., my dear? We may as well dub ourselves x. y. z. and feel mad over it, surely man is not born for such playful nothingths and if we dance to-day like a jackal that tasted honey, to-morrow we might weep like a helpless child. Is this life?'—

'I see' interrupted the mortified Dewan Bahadur. 'I see, I see, it is the devil of a Vas that has spoilt you; the wicked Vasudeva, Sastry as he calls himself, has robbed you of your brains! I shall break his knavish pate to-morrow and now let the devil take care of you;' so saying he pushed her a little and left the bedroom in a very pleasant mood. Seetha followed him took him by the arm, fell at his feet, and with tears in her eyes entreated him to return; she gently soothed his anger saying 'My dear, I have been too rash; kindly excuse me. I was too hasty. Do you think I am insensible to the honors showered upon you. Are they not mine as well? They are really more mine than yours for you have other concerns to engage your attention, but to me you, your honors and your fame are the only concern. What is there more pleasing to the wife than the good reputation of the husband. The husband is our joy, our wealth and our God. My dear, I know you are incapable of getting angry with me; you love me so well and our love can never suffer...—words which only a woman knows how to speak and which in her mouth form a real power too much even for a Dewan Bahadur and c. i. e. put together, to resist. With kind words, betel chewing and sandal smearing the rest of the night passed on pleasantly enough.

(To be continued.)

---

THE SPIRIT UNIVERSAL.

TRANSLATED FROM NAMMA'LWAR'S* Tiruvoymozhi.

It is I that made all this ocean-girt world;
It is I that become all this ocean-girt world;
It is I that own all this ocean-girt world;
It is I that dug out all this ocean-girt world;
It is I that ate up all this ocean-girt world?
Wedded to the Lord of the ocean-girt world,
This is what my daughter (mused) says,
And ye men of the ocean-girt world what shall I say to you?

I am all this visible earth:
I am all this visible sky:
I am all this visible fire:
I am all this visible wind:
I am all this visible ocean:
Wedded to the ocean-colored Lord,
This is what my daughter says,
And ye men of the visible world what shall I say to you?

---

Extracts.

Body is the boat by which we must cross the river of life. Forgiveness is the oar by which it is so to be propelled. Truth is the ballast that is to steady it. The practice of righteousness is the rudder for dragging it along difficult waters; and the wind to urge its sail onwards is charity.—The Mahabharata.

Attachment to worldly things is productive of evil. The silk worm is finally destroyed by the cocoon that itself weaves.—Hind.

Who could have thought such darkness lay concealed Within thy beam of sun! or who could find
Whilst fly, and leaf, and insect stood revealed,
That to such countless orbs thou mad'st us blind!
Why do we then shun death with anxious stride
If light can thus deceive, wherefore not life?
—Bhama White.

The divine effort is never relaxed; the current in the sun will convert itself to grass and flowers; and man though in brothels, or jails, or on gibbets, is on his way to all that is good and true.—Benjamin.

The end of education is to know ourselves and the world: the means for this end is to know the best which has been thought and said in the world.—Matthew Arnold.

God is revealed, whenever a man helps his neighbour, or a mother denies herself for her child, whenever a soldier dies without a murmur, or a sailor puts out into the darkness to rescue the perishing.—Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

A wise man on earth is a man fallen among wild beasts.—Plato.

* A great Vaishnavite poet, philosopher and saint.
News and Notes.

Swami Saradananda, who is now in London is to go shortly to New York to take the place of Swami Vivekananda now in England.

More Sanyasins to England:—Swami Vivekananda is expected to be here by the end of this year, when Swami Anukulchandra another disciple of Sri Ramakrishna Ramakrishna Deva, will sail for England.

Mr. H. Dharmapala, General Secretary, Mahabodhi Society sends us the following most sympathetic letter:

"All hail to the Prabuddha Bhrata. I send herewith one pound sterling in the name of the Mahabodhi Society for the Prabuddha Bhrata. May its mellifluous fragrance purify the materialistic atmosphere of fallen India! Your efforts will be crowned with success and 'Prabuddha Bhrata' will surely awaken the lethargic sons of Bharat Varsha."

Swami Vivekananda in London:—

"Here in London, Swamiji Vivekananda has been holding class lectures, 63, St. George's Road, S.W., every Tuesday and Thursday both in the morning and evening. The number of his students has been increasing very rapidly. He has, therefore, opened a question class which he holds every Friday, at 8-30 p.m. It is a great wonder, indeed, that the Swami has been able to attract, from the very commencement of the course of his lectures, so many men in a materialistic city like London, where none cares a fig for religion, where politics reigns supreme in the minds of the people, especially now at the time of the London season—the season of balls, feasts, and all sorts of entertainments. He who has once listened to the great Swami, is tempted to attend every lecture that he delivers. We cannot but own that the man possesses a great magnetic power or some power divine by which he even draws so many Londoners towards him. Many a lady and many a learned man here have become his students. To-day Rev. Canon Haswell, a very learned man, came to his class. He has at once marvelled at his lectures. * * *"

Indian Mirror.

The Great Sankara Chariar.—The anniversary day of this great and unique personality in the exposition of Hindu religious thought fell on the 24th April. Gooty and its adjacent villages had a memorable time of it. Four thousand people in all, of all castes, and of no castes, and of all creeds, were fed. Last year only 1,500 were fed; and this year the event attracted more notice, and entailed more expense. This year the ceremony extended over two days. On the first day, Brahmans and non-Brahmin Hindus who chose to accept invitation, and then, Mahomedans, Erikanal, Lambadis, Woddars, Malas, Madigas and Scavengers and all others who chose to come were sumptuously fed in the spacious Maumood Chonitry and its compound. On the second day a limited number of people, Brahmans and a few others, all about three hundred, were fed. The feeding of people of all castes and colours, is an innovation for the better; and this we owe to the inspiration of the saintly Brahmin who is known by the name of Molagavalli Subhhia. This Brahmin is a saint indeed by his piety and by his selfless conduct, and has therefore considerable influence over the people. One such man can do more than a thousand preachers. He makes Hari Sankirtan wherever he goes and the people venerate him. He makes regular pilgrimages to the sacred tomb of Manickabrahmu, a Mahorrhith Brahmin Sanvati, near Umabad in Hyderabad territory. This Subhiah preaches with great emotion and enthusiasm against the mischievous and sinful notions of despising Chandles and others. He is Catholic in religion and a true philanthropist. And he wrote the other day that he was happy that Sankara's day was to be observed at Gooty; and that the organiser, Mr. J. Sneemivasu Row, should see that all people whether of caste or no caste, should be given prasadam first, in an humble spirit and with cordiality, before he could partake of anything! In view of creating better ideas of duty and fellow feeling among bigoted people, for the betterment of their own selves as well as of their countrymen of all castes and out of the pale of caste, the event is a remarkable one.

The correspondent to the Hindu from which the above is extracted, proceeds:—

"The life of Sankarachariar, the great Teacher and Reformer, comes vividly before the mind's eye. A Brahmin by birth who gave up all that is held dear by the world, and adopted the life of an ascetic, not to seek solitude and attain moksha for himself, but to walk on foot from place to place all over this vast continent of India, to eradicate the vicious practices of certain classes of worshippers, purge all sects of their impurities, hold most subtle controversies with the keenest intellects of the age, make voluminous commentaries on Brahms Sutras, Upanishads, Vishnu Sahasranamam, Bagavadgita, and what not, which was of a philosophical nature, and to compose deeply devotional prayers. And all this he did with a sublime intellect and unirrivalled energy within his short life of 32 years! A great benefactor of his race whose fame is now resounding throughout the world and whose thoughts are admired by the greatest intellects of the present age! * * *"

All praise and honor to the organisers of the movement. The example deserves to be widely followed.
BOOKS.

N.B.—No books are sold at the Awakened India Office.

MATHAR NEETHY (EDITED

3RD EDITION NEATLY GOT UP.

A prose work in Tamil, consisting of morals essentially required for our women, with an appendix of Harichandrapranam 100 pages octavo. Price Rs. 5, with postage Rs. 9.

commission to per cent. Apply to the Author, Mr. A. C. Murugesu Moodeliar, Pensioned Supervisors, Local Fund, D. F. W., VELLORE, N. Arcot District.

The Madras Standard.  "We commend the book on its own merits to the Tamil reading public, who are so much indebted to the author who in no small degree deserves to be apty rewarded for the labour and time he must have spent over his little but worthy addition to the library of Southern India."

The Hindu.  "We are glad to introduce to the public a new work, "Mathar Neethy", written by Mr. A. C. Murugesu Moodeliar, Pensioned Supervisor, now at Vellore. ***

 The author throughout quotes well-known, simple and suitable verses from classical authors to support his precepts, and to serve as watch-words to be ever present in memory for guidance in practical life." ***

The Madura Mail.  "We are happy to welcome the third edition of this extremely useful and interesting book, intended solely for our wives, sisters and daughters. Within a period of eight years, it has reached a 3rd edition, showing that it has at ained great popularity among the small but widening world of educated Hindoos women of the Southern Districts.  We wish to see it in the hands of every Hindu girl, and even grown up women."

"The South Indian Times."  "The editor of this very useful and interesting compilation in Tamil has favoured us with a copy of it, and we are happy to recommend it to the general public as almost the only book fit to be read by the girl population of our Tamil Districts ***

VALUABLE PUBLICATIONS.

1. The Bhagavad-Gita.—Translated into English, with a learned Preface of 24 pages and valuable Foot-notes by Babu Pramodadas Mitra, Fellow of the Universities of Calcutta and Allahabad. —The only reliable translation that has yet been offered to the public, both as preserving the true spirit of the original text and, at the same time, strictly following, as far as practicable, the rules of English grammar and idiom, as coming from the pen of a renowned Sanskrit and English scholar of the day. Price, leather cover, Rs. 2 1/2 cloth. Rs. 1 1/2 paper, as. 8.

2. HANSA GITA.—Sublime Ethical Precepts, from the Mahabharata (Sanskrit Text), with English Translation, by the same author. Price, as. 4.

3. BRAHMA, ISWARA AND MAYA (English) by the same author. Price, as. 4.

4. HINDU SYSTEM OF WORSHIP (English) by the same author. Price, as. 4.

5. Vedantic conception of Brahmat (English) by author.

6. SARASWATI SABASRANAMA (Sanskrit Text only). Price as. 2.

APPLY TO

The Sanskrit-Ratnamala Publishing Society,

Chaukhamba, BENARES CITY.

Celebrated English Translation of Yulksirat Ramayan.

Brahmavadin Series.

NOW READY.

Only a few copies.

Bhakti-Yoga, by Swami Vivekananda. Paper bound, Rs. 1. Cloth bound, Rs. 1-8-0.

Ideal of a Universal Religion, by Swami Vivekananda with a bust of the Swami, printed over cover. Price 2 annas 6 pices.

Postage Extra.

Prabuddha Bharata Series.

Messrs. THOMPSON & CO.,

Broadway, Madras.

Swami Vivekananda Series.

Published and sold by S. C. Mitra, No. 2, Nayan Chand Dutt's Lane, Beadon Street, Calcutta.

No. 1—Vivekananda's Lectures in the Parliament of Religions, Chicago, America, with an analysis and Bengali translation and a portrait of Swaminarayan, (containing 180 pages) price 8 annas, postage 1 anna.

No. 2—Vivekananda's Reply to the Address of the Hindus of Madras with an appeal to Young Bengal. With an analysis and Notes. Price 2 annas.

No. 3—Vivekananda's Two Lectures (1) The Soul and God.

(2) The Religion of Love.

No. 4—An Article on Reincarnation.

No. 5—Vivekananda's Reply to the Address of the Maharaja of Kohat, Rajputana.

No. 6—Is the Soul Immortal? And the Song of the Sanyasis.

No. 7—Swamiji Vivekananda in England, 1895.

No. 8—Another Version of the Lecture at Brooklyn.

No. 9—Address on Vedanta Philosophy—The Ideal of a Universal Religion.

No. 10—Swamini Vivekananda in England 1896.

No. 11—Karma Yoga (Madras Edition).

Price one anna and Postage six pices each from No. 2 to 11.

The Prabuddha Bharata.

MONTHLY CIRCULATION NEARLY 4000 COPIES.

Annual Subscription including Postage.

For India and Burma ... ... ... Re. 1-8-0

For Ceylon ... ... ... Re. 1-12-0

For Mauritius ... ... ... Rs. 2-0-0

For Foreign Countries, i.e., those not served by the Indian Post ... ... ... 4s.

For a Single Copy ... ... ... 3 as. postage ½ anna.

No order will be registered unless accompanied with remittance of the full subscription for a year, or accompanied with directions to collect the same by sending all the back issues of the current volume per V. P. P.

The year of the Awakened India commences July. Persons becoming subscribers in the course of the year will be supplied with all the back issues.

All communications literary and otherwise are to be addressed to 'The Manager, Awakened India, Mylapore, Madras.'

Subscribers are particularly requested to write the name and address LEGIBLY and clearly, and to quote the REGISTER NUMBER found on the wrapper to facilitate reference.